ST. JOSEPH CHAMBER OF COMMERCE: THE VOICE OF

From the Chamber President:

Greetings Chamber Members,

I recently read an article entitled 5 Ways To Climb The Corporate Ladder by "CJ The Money Guru" (www.cjthemoneyguru.com).

The majority of the tips given by the blogger focus not on working harder, but on building relationships.

The article really resonated with me because I've seen this to be true in my own career. I used to believe the ticket was accuracy, perfection, and hours in a desk chair. But as I've matured, I've realized that it's more important to take the time to seek people out, pay attention to them, listen to them, socialize with them, encourage them, support them, and show them they are valued (including – and especially - those who are in positions of power and may intimidate you!). It's important for your face to be seen!

That's where Chamber comes in. Our monthly Chamber member meetings are your opportunity to introduce yourself to someone you've never met before. Or maybe you've met them, but never sat next to them and chatted during the networking lunch time. When you push yourself to persevere through the uncomfortable "getting-to-know-you" stage, you can enjoy lasting business connections that pay dividends down the road when you least expect it.

Sincerely,

Leslie Lane

Leading by Example Has Limitations

By Bob Ringstrom

Learning and owning a job with a lot of 'hustle' can be a formula for success. The hustler may be assigned to additional details as his value is recognized. This only sharpens his expertise as he gains responsibilities. He is seen as committed to the mission and destined for a management role. Highly motivated workers may also be tempted to take on more than they can handle. This can be a self-serving strategy to set themselves apart from other employees. But ultimately, the high-performer tends to prevail and is promoted.

As a new manager, he's still prone to apply his usual work ethic. But as manager, there are increased expectations with time limitations. His style might lead to confusion and burnout. He may choose to review his "formula" and reluctantly give in to sharing the work load along with the successes. Instead of doing it all; he shifts his focus to getting it all done!

This is where leadership skills are developed, and teams are built. Managers learn to delegate in a manner that inspires employees to respond efficiently and with purpose. The team begins to recognize their personal influence on the success of organizational goals. This understanding of one's personal value to an organization and its accomplishments builds 'buy-in' and loyalty. Delegation can drive employees to become engaged.

~Picking up after yourself has its virtues. Picking up after others is failed leadership.

The Baby Boom----er generation brought us to the moon, invented the microwave & created the American Homeownership Dream. This vision of having your feet firmly planted in your home for 30 years proved that homeownership was a smart, solid investment - and it still is. However, time marches on & our intelligent, inventive Baby Boomer crew have been surpassed in population by the new Millennial kids on the block. They usher in a “shared economy” mentality & a focus on what they can experience rather than what they can acquire.

This cultural shift brings individuals & families that are less interested in owning their home and--- much more interested in renting their home. We are on the cusp of the evolution from “real estate” to “rent estate”.

Investment properties are easy to acquire & maintain, the income is recession proof & financial freedom is up for grabs.

Smart decision making is key to making this a success or a failure. Plan to bring in a team of experts that focus on building & protecting your investment. This new American Dream isn’t for the elite or already wealthy person - it’s for everyone that wants to take control of their financial future.

And that spells opportunity - a huge opportunity for those that can see a property as an asset that can make their cash register ring every month.

SBA Announces 2018 Top Minnesota Lenders at Conference

The U.S. Small Business Administration (SBA) honored lenders throughout Minnesota for their commitment to helping small businesses succeed during the sixth Annual Lenders Conference on September 6, 2018. SBA's Great Lakes Regional Administrator, Robert Scott, presented the awards in honor of the lenders with the highest participation in SBA-guaranteed loan programs from July 1, 2017 to June 30, 2018. BankVista was recognized once again as a leader for small business lending.

"The lending community is such an important part of the small business ecosystem," said Scott. "Thanks to your hard work, small businesses are able to obtain capital to expand markets, launch new products and invest in new equipment, leading to economic development and job creation here, and throughout the nation."

The SBA's ability to help small businesses access capital is tied to the country's lending institutions and its partners' ability and willingness to loan money. The SBA doesn't lend the money directly to entrepreneurs to start or grow a business, but sets the guidelines for loans made by its partners (lenders, community development organizations and micro-lending institutions). The SBA guarantees that these loans will be repaid, which eliminates some of the risk to the lending partners.

As a Preferred SBA Lender, BankVista works with the U.S. Small Business Administration to offer these special loan programs. If your business doesn't qualify for traditional lending, talk to a BankVista commercial lender to learn more about additional options that may be available to you.
