From the Chamber President:

Greetings Chamber Members!

I cannot believe August is here already. What an incredible summer we've had thus far! I know I have been enjoying every minute of the warm weather, leaves on the trees and the lack of snow. When I'm tempted to complain about the heat, I am reminded that in (possibly) less than four months, we will be back in our winter gear. Therefore, I won't allow myself to complain for one second!

On my way to work this morning, I was listening to a radio host interview an author who wrote a book about controlling your tongue. Each chapter in the book reviewed a "misuse" of the tongue (lying, gossip, cursing, boasting, etc.) and a correlating challenge to help the reader practice control in these areas. The one that stuck out the most was the challenge to stop all negative talk and complaining for a full 24 hour day. I instantly thought: "Well, I could stop my mouth but not my brain!" But, that kneejerk reaction got me thinking – maybe it's not the mouth, but the brain that's the problem.

In doing a little research, I stumbled upon something called "expectancy theory." Essentially, an individual's motivation to behave a certain way is derived from their expectation of the result. This is really a great way to gauge organizational performance, isn't it? What story is our organization telling our staff? What story is our staff telling themselves? Whatever story you tell yourself really says a lot about how you will act.

I have a very wise supervisor who always says "separate the stories from the facts." What do we actually know as fact? What truth statement can we nail down? This will help you stop the negative thoughts (or spoken words!) and focus on the facts.

I challenge you this month to set aside the dramatic narrative in your head and write down THE FACTS about your business and your goals. What is realistic? What have we already achieved? What actions are we truly taking to achieve our goals? Delete these thoughts: "The economy is down! The economy never truly recovered from 2008! We'll never make it in this economic climate!" Replace with these thoughts: "We've achieved X in 2017. We took X, Y, & Z action. We will complete A, B, and C in 2018." Now that sounds more like a business plan than a Hollywood screenplay!

Best Regards! Leslie Lane

Proactive vs. Reactive Healthcare: What's the Difference?

Nearly all forms of healthcare can be broken down into one of two different categories: "proactive" and "reactive". Unfortunately, most Americans focus strictly on reactive healthcare, only visiting the doctor's office when a problem arises. While this may seem like the best course of action, many health and wellness experts are now stressing the importance of proactive healthcare.

The Basics of Proactive vs Reactive: Reactive healthcare involves reacting to an adverse disease, injury, condition or symptom. If you wake up one morning with a fever and body aches, for instance, you may react by visiting the doctor. Depending on the doc's diagnosis, he or she may prescribe you with antibiotics to help your body fight the infection. Both you and the doctor are reacting to the symptoms.

Proactive healthcare differs from reactive in the sense that action is taking "before" symptoms manifest. Rather than waiting until you feel the symptoms of the cold or flu virus, you can take a proactive approach towards your health by boosting your immune system with vitamin C, antioxidants, and by drinking plenty of fluids.

Healthcare Costs

Healthcare in the US costs an estimated $3 trillion annually, which is roughly the twice as much as other developed nations. The cost of surgeries, prescription drugs, and other forms of treatment continues to rise, placing a heavy financial burden on Americans and their families. While there's no way to completely eliminate these costs, there are ways to reduce it, one of which is through proactive healthcare. Focusing your efforts on proactive healthcare can drastically reduce these costs.

Proactive Healthcare Tips:

Schedule annual wellness appointments.

Maintain a healthy weight.

Maintain a physically active lifestyle.

Strive for a solid 7-8 hours of restful sleep per night.

When you or a loved one experiences acute or chronic pain, or change in health status does occur, call SPOT Rehab and Home Health Care at 320-259-4151

Brenny Transportation, Inc. has been named one of the Top 150 Workplaces in Minnesota by the Star Tribune. A complete list of those selected is available at StarTribune.com/topworkplaces2018 and is also published in the Star Tribune Top Workplaces special section for Sunday, June 24.

Produced by the team that compiles the Star Tribune report of the best-performing public companies in Minnesota, Top Workplaces recognizes the most progressive companies in Minnesota based on employee opinions measuring engagement, organizational health and satisfaction. The analysis included responses from 71,000 employees at public, private and nonprofit organizations.

Star Tribune names Local Business Top 150 Workplace in Minnesota

Star Tribune Publisher Michael J. Klingensmith said, "The companies in the Star Tribune Top 150 Workplaces deserve high praise for creating the very best work environments in the state of Minnesota. My congratulations to each of these exceptional companies."

To qualify for the Star Tribune Top Workplaces, a company must have more than 50 employees in Minnesota. Over 2,400 companies were invited to participate. Rankings were composite scores calculated purely on the basis of employee responses.

"What a true honor it is to receive the Top Workplace Award! Receiving such an award happens by making sure we put our team first. It is completely about the team and making sure they are taken care of professionally and personally. Thank you to the team for giving us feedback so we can continue to be the best for you!" says Bonnie Supan, General Manager.

PEOPLE PROBLEMS AT WORK

By: Bob Ringstrom

Problem employees can surface in any workplace. Even if the work culture has been solid and output has been great; problems will surface. You might not recognize it immediately. But the hard facts are; something or someone may influence your team's quality.

Negative employees who attack the company and its leadership can affect morale and ultimately productivity. Avoid confronting them with personal accusations. Instead, meet privately to clearly state the problem and explain the importance in ending it.

Workplace crime costs U.S. businesses $50 billion a year; the majority in small and medium-sized businesses. Shrinkage threatens the organization's very existence.

The offender(s) and their methods must be identified. Security systems preventing theft may be necessary. Culprits have to be identified, corrected and frequently released. Criminal charges should be a consideration.

Rule violators tend to ignore policy and procedures. Frequently having to correct a new employee's failure to follow rules may be a sign of continuing problems. Parting ways early may be a consideration; especially if the new salesperson's behavior alienates customers. Rule breakers often-times apply their approach to rules; on or off the job. Reckless conduct, such as driving dangerously or drinking on the job, can leave the employer liable.

An employee's personal life can frequently affect their job performance as well as attendance. A physical difficulty or an emotional conflict in their life may impact their ability to perform. A sympathetic private conversation would be in order. You may also consider referring the worker to an employee assistance program.

Conclusion: Direct, clear communication is the key to dealing with most employee problems. Expectations should be clarified with written policies and performance reviews.
